About Fairmont Hotels & Resorts

Nineteenth century Canadian Pacific visionary, William Cornelius Van Horne, dreamt of building lavish rest stops alongside the newly constructed Canadian Pacific Railway. Noted for his famous quote, "If we can't export the scenery, we'll import the tourists", Van Horne did just that. He built Mount Stephen House high amongst the wilds of the Canadian Rocky Mountains, and began welcoming guests to this first-ever Canadian Pacific Hotels property in 1886. Other grand hotels followed, with the legendary Banff Springs built in 1888, Chateau Lake Louise completed in 1890, and Le Chateau Frontenac opening its doors in 1893. Over the next century, Canadian Pacific Hotels continued to expand across Canada, acquiring the renowned CN hotel chain in 1988, which brought the distinguished Manoir Richelieu in Charlevoix, Quebec and Jasper Park Lodge in Alberta to the CP collection. This acquisition also crowned Canadian Pacific Hotels the largest owner-operated hotel company in the country, with hotels located from Victoria, B.C., to St. John's, Newfoundland. The organization's next step was to move outside of Canada with the purchase of the sun-destination Princess Hotels, situated in Mexico, Arizona, Bermuda and Barbados, in 1998. Motivated to expand globally, Canadian Pacific Hotels acquired Fairmont Hotels in the fall of 1999, creating Fairmont Hotels & Resorts.
